Psycho-Oncology

Support for patients and their relatives

Dear patience, dear relatives, a cancer disease or a suspected cancer diagnosis requires a person to consider an array of emotional, medical, social and existential demands. The medical treatment may also result in physical impairments. It is quite natural that such situations are accompanied by feelings of uncertainty, fear and a high level of emotional stress. The psychooncology approach has become a crucial tool to improve your well being. Therefor our well trained psychooncological team would like to support you.

Your psycho-oncology team

What does a psychooncological consultation include?

- Someone who listens carefully and offers you to talk about what troubled you
- Someone who offers you strategies in coping with fear, grief, emotional overwhelming, fatigue and pain
- Someone who supports you in developing new life perspectives
- Someone who reinforces you in discovering your very own personal resources
